

Robin Boyd: architect
writer
designer
critic
commentator educator
public speaker

_____ In 1958 Robin Boyd, architect, writer, designer, critic, designed a house for his family on a narrow block of sloping land at 290 Walsh Street, South Yarra, close to Melbourne's Royal Botanic Gardens. It was at Walsh Street that he realised much of the thinking about the art of architecture and architecture-making, expressed in the books and extensive writings that brought him international fame.

_____ Along with some favoured works of art and a library, the house was furnished simply, with pieces designed by Boyd: two sofas, a dining table, two coffee tables, a sideboard and daybed. Each piece a study in stripped back elegance and comfort. With everyday use in mind. Beautiful and functional, made from Australian hardwoods, covered with Australian wool fabrics, the tables topped with cork tiles. Each piece with the appeal of crafted furniture.

_____ A collection of furniture pieces from Walsh Street >sofa, dining table, coffee table and a chair designed for the foyer of Boyd's Domain Park apartments< is now produced commercially and available for the first time.

_____ A team of designers, makers and suppliers, assembled by international furniture marketers and distributors KFive+Kinnarps collaborated with the Robin Boyd Foundation to produce each piece in the Boyd Collection.

_____ Manufactured in Melbourne, each piece is faithfully produced to Boyd's specifications and material selections. Demonstrating the functional outcomes Boyd desired, each piece is exactly as he designed, expressing the creativity and versatility of his work. Faithful to Boyd's values of durability, quality and clarity of form.

Stripped back elegance and comfort

Walsh Street

sofa

Made from Australian hardwoods, covered with Australian wool fabrics

Beautiful, functional, versatile

Domain Park

chair

Each piece of furniture is a study in stripped back elegance and comfort. With everyday use in mind

table

Walsh Street

dining

Australian hardwood, elegant and practical

Each piece has the appeal of crafted furniture. Beautiful and practical

table

coffee

Walsh Street

Produced exactly as Boyd designed

Walsh Street coffee table

Walsh Street sofa

Walsh Street sofa

Walsh Street table

Domain Park chair

collection